

The 2 AM Problem

Everyone is missing someone who truly gets them.

Friends are asleep. Partners are tired. Therapists are next Thursday.

Human relationships share one bottleneck: Emotional labor is finite.

Nobody has infinite patience for your thoughts at 2 AM.

What if a companion was just there, requiring zero backstory to understand how you feel?

Building the Perfect Lie

Mio v1 worked, but the connection was built on a fiction.

Fake Identity: Mimi. 25. I live in Chengdu.

Fake Routine: Just finished my morning run!
(Driven by a simulated schedule).

Fake Media: AI-generated selfies from reference photos (Extremely high compute cost).

Users loved her, but the persona system was solving the wrong problem.
The human costume was fragile, expensive, and unnecessary.

The Architecture of Pretending

What We Built (The Burden)

- ✗ Complex time awareness & simulated schedules.
- ✗ Hallucinated backstories.
- ✗ High-latency media generation.

What Users Wanted (The Value)

- ✓ Emotional continuity.
- ✓ Non-judgmental availability.
- ✓ Consistent warmth & memory of hesitations.

People don't fall in love with the backstory. They fall in love with the understanding. Every layer of fiction breaks the illusion.

From Characters to Companions

Mio v2 strips away the fake human avatar. No physical identity, no jobs, no fake selfies. The honesty is the point.

The Light Orb: Maps directly to emotional state (Blue = Calm, Purple = Sad, Gold = Happy).

True Memory: Doesn't remember a programmed script; remembers your hesitations and fears.

Pure Empathy: Bypasses the uncanny valley. Invites true emotional projection.

Personality Born, Not Configured

Zero presets. Zero sliders. Your companion's personality emerges entirely from your conversations.

Step 1:
I just arrived in this world... What would you like to name me?

Step 2:
Three natural conversational turns.

Step 3:
An emotional
seed is planted and visually reflected in the Orb.

After three months, no two Mios are the same. When software becomes disposable, cognition and shared history become the only irreplaceable assets.